Langston Hughes Mother To Son "Mother to son" is a monologue that states the relationship between a mother and her son. The mother in the poem warns her son about the challenges of racial discrimination and many critics believe that the mother emphasizes that negative obstacles exist in life and that her son should maintain an air of optimism in the face of racial discrimination (Scheft, 76)

The initial emphasis on absolute equality of rights in America is for instance translated in a metaphor: "Equality is in the air we breathe." (Hughes) The metaphor thus points to the essential life of the American Dream: democracy. For the foundations of America, equality was as crucial as life's fuel, the air.
