Stanford is not the only U.S. university to have received Iranian-linked financial contributions while giving a platform to Tehran's apologists. In June 2017, a New York jury ruled that the Alavi Foundation, a U.S.-based Islamic "charity" that was donating heavily to numerous U.S. academic institutions, was in fact a front group for the Iranian regime.

Prozak Diaries is an analysis of emerging psychiatric discourses in post-1980s Iran. It examines a cultural shift in how people interpret and express their feeling states, by adopting the language of psychiatry, and shows how experiences that were once articulated in the richly layered poetics of the Persian language became, by the 1990s, part of a clinical discourse on mood and affect.

Music was one of the first casualties of the Iranian Revolution. It was banned in 1979, but it quickly crept back into Iranian culture and politics. The state made use of music for its propaganda during the Iran-Iraq war. Over time music provided an important political space where artists and audiences could engage in social and political debate.
