Fredson Book Review - Confessions on the 7:45 The Confession

Timely, terrifying, realistic and gripping, "The Confession" takes the reader through the often questionable processes of the criminal and judicial systems, aptly demonstrating that "criminal justice" is often a misnomer and an oxymoron.

The Confession (1999) - IMDb
THE CONFESSION is a gripping courtroom thriller about a man who loses everything and in return gains his soul. It explores one man's quest for justice and another's man's perception of morality. The scheming dynamics of each character builds to a pulse-pounding conclusion when the lines between good and evil are crossed.

"The Confession" one of the better books in the series. It has a complex plot with sometimes too many threads.
It was difficult to follow the motivations of the main characters and this difficulty was woven into the plot with care, illustrating that Inspector Rutledge struggled with this too. I'm just not sure it needed to be so difficult.
